GERMANY'S SURPLUS POPULATION.

From a report by Consul Scheele, of Barmen, we learn that the increase of the population in Germany has been so great during the last decade that the Malthusian theory of population and its attendant effects have been almost universally accepted by German economists and statisticians. Figures show that the population in Prussia has increased during the years of 1816 to 1864 from 10,350,000 to 19,260,000. Up to 1875, inclusive, the population of the old Prussian provinces had increased 21,330,000, that is, 105 per cent. in sixty years.

From 1875 to 1880 the increase of population in all the German States is computed at about 525,000 per annum. As the increase of population is in geometric ratio, the German population, which according to the census taken on the 1st of December 1880, was 45,250,000, would double within the next fifty years.

At the present rate of increase the German population will reach 60,000,000 in the year 1900, and in the year 1925 it will probably attain 80,000,000. Comparing the census returns in Germany with those of France the contrast is startling. The population of France shows an increase of only 389,000 during the period of five years. This excessively small increase occurred principally in large cities, and was caused, for the most part, by foreign influx, while the German population has increased over 2,000,000, during the same period. At the rate of which French population is now growing, it would not double before 433 years had elapsed; in other words, it is almost stationary. A statistical table recently drawn up shows the birth-rate in Germany to be 3.91 per hundred of population, while in France it is only 2.47. The net excess of births in Germany over the deaths amounted to 523,970 for the year of 1881. And it is to be observed that German population does not, so far, show any tendency to diminish.

In the poor and densely populated districts the increase exceeds the average for the whole of Germany. For instance, while the increase of population throughout Germany during the years 1867 to 1871 average a little over 3 1/2 per cent. the increase in Upper Silesia, where, according to frequent declarations of the Prussian Government, a failure of the potato or cabbage crops brings the 100,000 inhabitants of this province to the verge of starvation, was 22 per cent. during the above named period. This constant increase of population in Germany naturally produces a corresponding increase of labor supply. Consequently wages and business decline in proportion so that by this time the German population is closely pressed for the means of subsistence.

The natural increase of population has almost exceeded the natural means of its subsistence, and this will continue unless the excessive growth receives a check or be diverged.

In the face of these facts a large and steady efflux of inhabitants from Germany is an economic necessity, and such outflow is regarded by many German sociologists as a blessing in disguise. This emigration en masse entails, however, a vast pecuniary loss on Germany. Close calculations of German economists have exhibited some astounding figures in this direction. For instance, Dr. Friedrich Kappe, for a number of years a citizen of the United States, and a noted writer on emigration subjects, estimates the capital in money and valuables taken away from Germany by each emigrant, at not less than 450 marks, or $108. The number of German emigrants landed in the different parts of the United States during the year 1881, was 248,923.

Taking the above named figures as a basis, Germany has lost directly on capital transferred to the United States the sum of 111,745,350 marks, or $25,818,884 during said year.

Dr. Engel, the chief of the Prussian bureau of statistics, and Dr. Fabri, an eminent authority on social science, calculate the average cost of bringing up a person of the lower and middle classes to the fifteenth year at not less than 2,000 marks, or $476. Germany has sent forth over 3,500,000 emigrants during the last sixty years, and of this number the greater part went during the last thirty years. The loss to Germany in feeding, sheltering, clothing, and educating this number of emigrants has been nearly seven milliards of marks. Adding the loss Germany has sustained in cash and valuables taken away by each emigrant, the total loss to Germany through emigration during the last sixty years may be set down as over nine milliards of marks, nearly twice the amount paid by France to Germany as war indemnity in 1881.

GOOD WORK.

The ticket nominated by the Republicans last Saturday gives general satisfaction, and is all in all, as strong a ticket as could have been made. There is not a gentleman named upon the ticket who is not eminently qualified to perform the duties of the office for which he is named, and each, and all, are entitled to, and will receive, the support of every Republican voter in the county. The Convention seemed animated from first to last with a sincere desire to make up a ticket that should meet the approval of the Republican party. They performed their work faithfully and well. There may be, and doubtless are, individuals who felt a momentary disappointment that some friend failed to receive a place upon the ticket, but nevertheless they realize the fact that every candidate had friends, both in and out of the convention, and that had their favorite been successful some one else would have been disappointed. We have faith that Republicans will now try individual preferences and pull together to elect the ticket.

THE WINNING TICKET.

In its issue of Saturday last the Battle Mountain Messenger, heretofore classed as a Democratic paper, places the Republican State ticket at the head of its editorial columns, and says:

In this issue we place at the head of our editorial column the Republican ticket, and inscribe upon our banner the name of E. Strotcher, our standard-bearer, the next Governor of Nevada.

Of course the above announcement will be no disappointment to our enemies, who have determined to make out that we leaned to the Republican side, and have treacherously stooped to black-mailing that they might defeat our ends. We will, in our next issue, fully explain all.

The gross receipts of the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1882, have been $41,255,317 10 against $39,217,511 55 the previous year. The receipts from the sale of postage stamps, postal cards and envelopes were $39,533,315, against $31,678,872 the previous year. The issue of stamps, etc., for 1882, amounts to $40,078,353, an increase over the previous year of $8,352,617.

Thus far 1882 has been an extraordinary year for fires. The estimated losses in the United States for eight months foot up more than $61,000,000 or $7,000,000 more than the average for four years.

The California State Temperance Convention has nominated a full State ticket, with Dr. E. H. McDonald at the head for Governor.

The resignation of the United States Minister at Copenhagen, W. H. Wyckham, has been received at the State Department.

Judge Folger has decided to accept the Saratoga nomination.

TOM FITCH'S LITTLE SCHEME.

How the Silver-Tongued Orator Was Going to Make Twelve Men Comfortable.

(Arizona Star.)

Tom Fitch is a man of infinite resources. Over in Cochise county they tell an anecdote about him which possesses a peculiar interest. When his tax suit against the Southern Pacific Railroad was up, Tom stoutly advised the indictment of Crocker for alleged perjury. The ground taken for the indictment was Crocker's affidavit that the railroad property in Cochise county was only worth $2,000 a mile.

"But," urged the foreman of the Grand Jury, "what's the use of it? We can never convict him."

"But we can indict him and bring him here for trial," protested Mr. Fitch.

"But he'll get clear," replied the foreman; "what can you accomplish by it?"

Tom looked the foreman squarely in the face, and hitching his chair a little closer to the listening jury, he replied confidentially: "We'll make twelve men in Cochise county comfortable for life."

That settled it.

Ancient and Modern Luxury.

Some startling instances of extravagance and prodigality are given by the writer of an article on "Ancient and Modern Luxury," which appeared in the new Quarterly. From the days when Lucullus spent $1,400 on a supper, and Calpurnia swallowed jewels, to modern times, when a certain Chinese lady is said to have rented an island for the special supply of bird's nests for her soup, the story is the same. Alcibiades gave $250 for a dog; and Augustus stated, as a title for gratitude, that he had exhibited 8,000 gladiators and given 3,500 beasts to be killed. Lolita Paulina wore a set of diamonds valued at $400,000, and Nero's diadem cost half a million. The Duc de Bourbon sold his coat for 5,200 gold crowns. A chateau for Mme. de Montepas was only erected for 2,861,728 livres. The Duc de la Torres gave 25,000 crowns for a horse.

The outfit for an eight day visit to the Compeigne Court of Napoleon III was 12,000 francs. In England the writer thinks there is a growing sense of moderation. It is true that $3,000 may be spent on flowers for a dinner; but still their exhibition gratifies taste. The conclusion at which the writer arrives is that if the fancy and sense of beauty are never to be advanced the higher faculties will become torpid. "Race without wants, race without ideas. Who thinks of Sparta when we speak of Greece? A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and the creations of the age of Pericles are a lasting boon to mankind."

--Fall Mail Gazette.
